Hi Tim,

I see that Naomi has provided you with our response.

Yes [REDACTED] is a current parent.

We have regular contact with [REDACTED] and other parents and despite that [REDACTED] has my phone number mobile, email etc to which [REDACTED] receives very timely responses, [REDACTED] remains very concerned.

This is why we have provided counselling services for parents as therapeutic support.

We are very confident that [REDACTED] will not require bed-based services as part of [REDACTED] transition.

As you say let's see how the story runs tonight or tomorrow.

Thanks Naomi. I suspected that was the case. Let's see how it runs tonight.

Hi Tim

Unfortunately the journalist has used some poetic licence in this instance. She called just before the story went to air and we had no time to respond. We have provided her with a response (which I will send in a separate email). She is running another story which will air either tonight (6-ish) or tomorrow morning. She has promised this will be more balanced and include our response - children's health qld also Dr Stephen Stathis forward for interview.

Cheers
Naomi

Do we have any response to this report that aired on [redacted] [redacted] They claim that WMHHS was contacted for comment but none was forthcoming. I would be interested to know when the request was made. Is the parent whose concerns were aired in this report actually the parent of a current patient? I recall your comment from Friday that one of the leading protagonists was not actually the parent of a patient.

Regards

TIM
